

Answer to “Write_The New Spectacles” Question

My reading experience is less stretched than her compared to Ho's. Before I entered the college, I hardly had chances to read English more than textbooks and short novels, since I don't have that much skills and vocabulary in English back then. However, when I first saw “The Economist” magazine in the US, it's like opened a new window for me to observe the world, at first time I can look at the world from a completely different perspective. These readings from native speakers really enlightened me of what to think and how to think about different things in a new world.