

A Profile of My Classmate

Jainam Kashyap is one of my classmates in my English class at Drexel and he really loves his life. Born in Baroda, Gujarat in western India, he grew up there and moved to Jaipur, Rajasthan when he was 11 years old. After that, he travels a lot between Jaipur and Mumbai and this experience made him more flexible to changes, becoming more mature, sensitive and professional. As a freshman, he is currently studying computer science at Drexel, since he is interested in computer science technology and has a deep passion for programming and computing. With his hacking experience in high school, he really found his love for this major. He loves sports, squash, soccer, ping pong and cricket are all his favorites and his favorite weekend activities are hanging out with friends, programming and watching movies. He is also a multilingual speaker, with a mastership of Hindi, Gujarati, Marathi, English and French, he also wants to continue his learning in Spanish in the future. He is also a fan of traveling, after going to Bhutan, Singapore, Thailand and the United States, he wants to explore Brazil and the entire Europe for their culture and people there. His life plan for the future is to be successful, happy, and most of all, keep learning until his last breath because he believes that success is a journey and he needs to explore it.
